(Folsom, Calif.) – Citrus Heights Mayor Steve Miller joins a growing list of local leaders supporting former intelligence officer and Northern California World Trade Center CEO Andrew Grant's campaign for Congress over incumbent Democrat Ami Bera.

“Andrew understands the needs of our residents and local businesses,” said Mayor Miller. “He has strong national security experience and a passion to serve. As Mayor of Citrus Heights, I see in Andrew someone who will work closely with us, and the entire Sacramento region. I am proud to endorse Andrew Grant's candidacy for U.S. Congress.”

Miller was appointed to the Council in 2005, elected in 2006, and became Mayor this month. He joins former Mayor Jeff Slowey, still a councilmember, in supporting Grant.

Andrew Grant is the former CEO of the Northern California World Trade Center, promoting expanded trade in the region. Andrew is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and a Marine Corps combat veteran, where he served as an intelligence officer and reconnaissance commander. He completed tours in Southeast Asia, the Middle East, and across Europe fighting alongside Special Forces units against Al Qaeda in Afghanistan and protecting Albanian citizens in Kosovo. He served on the staff of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and finished his uniformed service with the Defense Intelligence Agency's North Korea analysis group.
