Irvine –The California Labor Federation, representing more than 2.1 million workers in 1,200 local unions across the state, announced their full support for Dave Min, who is running for Congress as the officially endorsed candidate of the California Democratic Party in California's 45th Congressional District.

Art Pulaski, Chief Officer, California Labor Federation, released the following statement:

"Washington needs leaders who will fight for working families and give those families a voice. As a member of Congress, Dave Min will listen to working people, not special interests and their lobbyists. He's serious about standing up to the Trump administration and we know he'll work for Orange County families every single day. The California Labor Federation is proud to endorse Dave Min for Congress because we know he is the right candidate to defeat Mimi Walters in November and represent California in Congress."

"Working families need someone to stand up for their interests in Washington, DC. I've spent my career doing just that, whether it was my time at the SEC prosecuting financial crimes and protecting people's retirement savings, or as a policy advisor on Capitol Hill working on solutions to the foreclosure crisis," added Min. "The California Labor Federation stands for the values and interests of working families, and I am so proud to join them in this fight. I want to be a champion for California's workers, whether it's fighting for universal health care, pension security, high-quality education, or a bottom-up economy that works for everyone."

Dave Min is the only candidate to receive support from the Labor movement in the race for the 45th District including the Southwest Regional Council of Carpenters and Teamsters Joint Council 42.
