ICYMI: Sam Jammal Earns Endorsement of the Fullerton Observer

CA-39's largest city's local newspaper backs hometown candidate as part of a wave of local endorsements.

Fullerton, CA — Former Obama Administration official, civil rights attorney and clean energy businessman, Sam Jammal, has earned the endorsement of the Fullerton Observer in California's 39th Congressional district. The newspaper published their recommendations for candidates and propositions in the June 5th statewide primary in their latest edition.

Jammal adds this endorsement to his growing list of support from the community. Sam has earned key local endorsements from the Orange County Young Democrats, the Tri-Counties Democratic Club, Coalition for Humane Immigrant Rights Los Angeles (CHIRLA), Fullerton Action & Communication Team, the Mexican-American Bar Association Political Action Committee, Honor PAC and the International Long Shoreman and Warehouse Union District Council. These endorsements demonstrate the growing grassroots support for Jammal, positioning him to be the most viable Democratic candidate to win a seat held by 24-year incumbent, Republican Ed Royce, who announced his retirement in January.

Jammal also recently unveiled a viral campaign ad titled 'Lulu' that has been widely praised in the district and across the country. The video has already racked in over half a million views across all platforms and was ranked by Roll Call as the #1 campaign ad worth watching last week.
