Gavin Newsom's Failed Track Record

Asleep at the Wheel: Second New Campaign Site Launched This Week Will Shine Light On Newsom's Failures As Mayor and Lieutenant Governor

California -- A new website launched Wednesday will educate Californians on Gavin Newsom's failed record as Mayor of San Francisco and Lieutenant Governor.

Gavin Newsom: Asleep at the Wheel will shine light on the various failures of Newsom's long track record as part of California's elite political class.

The website, the second launched this week focused on educating Californians on Newsom's true background and failures, includes as its first feature former Mayor Newsom's once-heralded "Ten Year Plan to Eradicate Homeless" in San Francisco during his tenure. According to the San Francisco Chronicle,

Newsom promised that “in 10 years...the worst of San Francisco’s homeless problem would be gone.”

“Like many of Newsom’s lofty promises, the plan fell terribly short and left the city reeling, spiraling deeper into homelessness and despair, to the extent that residents now pass by homeless encampments and step over heroine needles on the streets,” according to information on the new site. “In fact, the Chronicle points to various, unacceptable failures 10 years after Newsom’s plan was launched and $1.5 billion in taxpayer funding was spent, including:

- “the homeless population hasn’t budged”
- “The homeless population is up 3 percent since 2005”
- “...that doesn’t include a new count of 914 unaccompanied children and youths who don’t have anywhere to call home.”
- “In one of the richest cities in the world, an estimated 2,200 public school students lack permanent homes.”

Articles including A decade of homelessness: Thousands in S.F. remain in crisis by The San Francisco Chronicle have only scratched the surface. Additional information and substantive background regarding Newsom’s failed tenure as a member of California’s political class will be frequently added and featured on the new site.
